CDL, CRL & HT Collaboration for Shared Print Infrastructure

Vision

The future of print collections is shared. Embedding shared print within the lifecycle of library collections promotes equity of access, enriches the scholarly record and increases opportunities for research and teaching. A well-developed collaborative and interoperable infrastructure ensures we will realize the full potential of our networks and their collective collections.

Mission

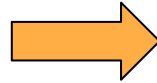

The California Digital Library, the Center for Research Libraries, and HathiTrust are committed to shared print's integration into the scholarly ecosystem by developing shared, interoperable infrastructure. We see this collaboration as an opportunity to shift the shared print paradigm so that the work is not tangential to the traditional collection, but fully integrated into the life-cycle of collections (from acquisitions to discovery and resource-sharing).

Integrating Shared Print into the Life-Cycle of Collections

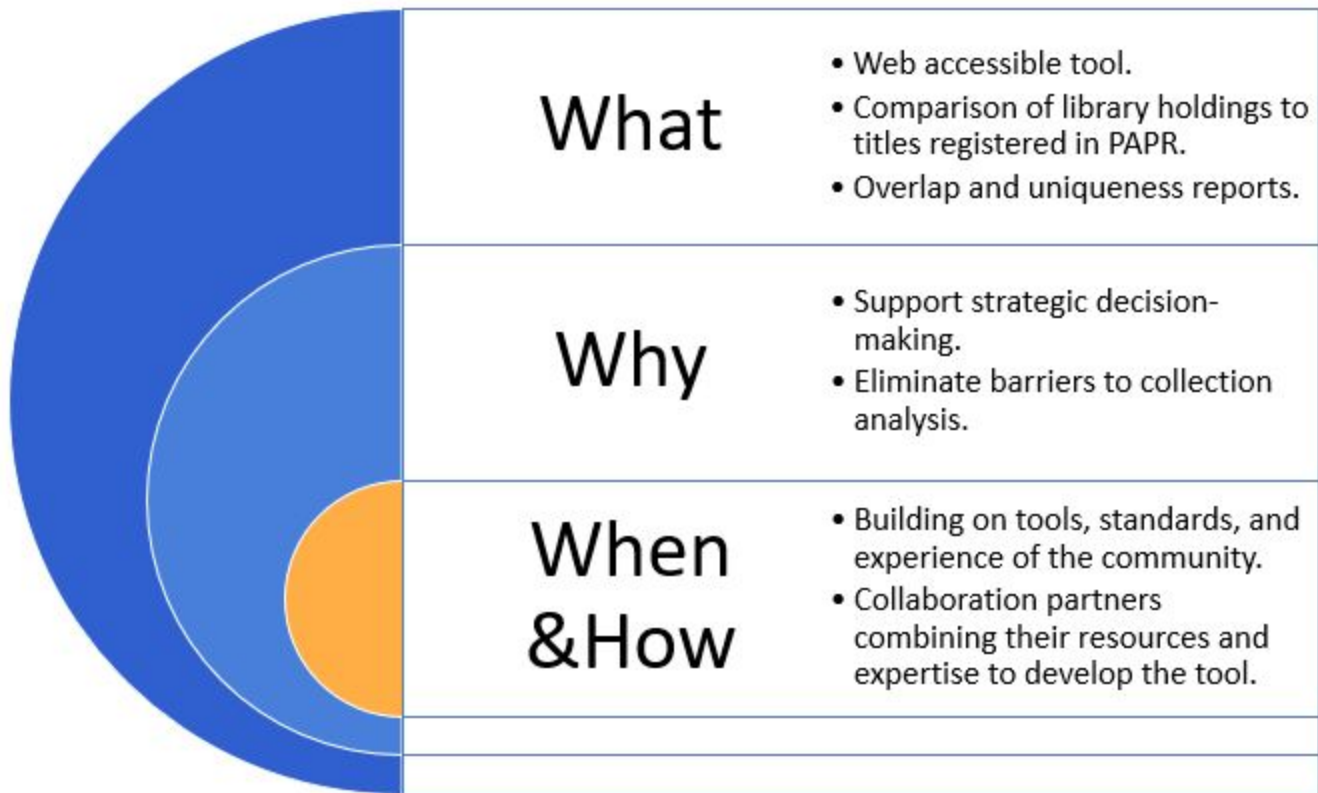

How? Starting quickly...

A low-barrier means of comparing local holdings against what has been retained.

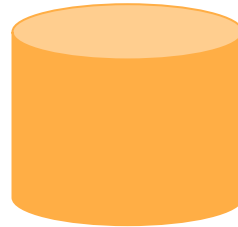

First project of the collaboration: collection comparison tool for serials and journals.

What goes in:

Serials data

Compared against:

Shared print retentions and trusted digital repositories registered in PAPR

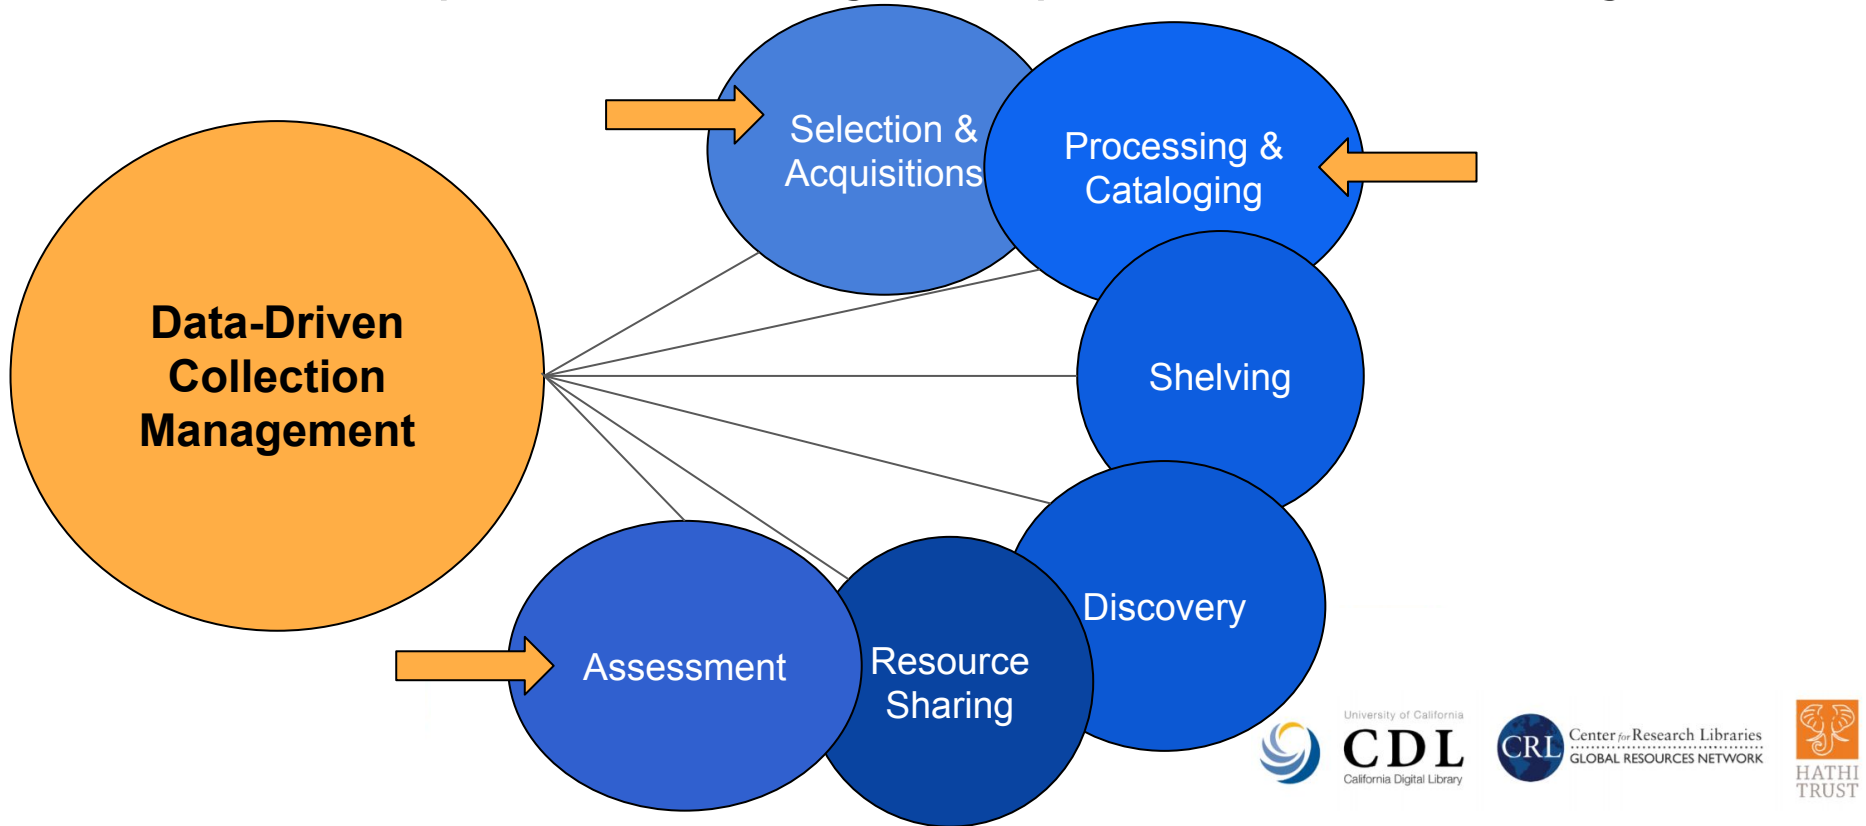

What comes back out:

Reports on retained and unretained titles

Questions?

Discussion - integrating shared print into library workflows

How do libraries imagine a future for their collections where shared print is an integrated part? What's missing?
